

Commentary

It is said in ancient scriptures that God created us so that we can experience His creation for Him. No, it is not our life per se, but we are stewards of this individual life form, and it is His Will that guides us to all of our life experiences. That is why we say that God comes to us as our life. What is in our very limited control is not necessarily what happens to us, but how we respond to what happens to us. Thus, the Fourth and Fifth of the Great Mystical Truths: (4) God comes to us as our life and (5) how we respond to our life is a reflection of our relationship with God. Now, I realize that you may never hear this in your church or in your spiritual study group. It is, as they say, "very deep stuff." The good news of such Pure Knowledge is that you don't necessarily have to understand it so much as to let it sit there. It will take root in its own time and take shape in its own form. So, to what degree, if at all, are we in control of the life that He is living through us? That question is called in many circles "the paradox of the First Initiation." Hope you all had a wonderful celebration of Thanksgiving.

Only Love,
Jerry
