Symposium

We Ultimately Become “How” We See

Today the world’s events seem to be playing out as outlined in St. John’s vision in Revelation. There is a great deal of anxiety. People are afraid that we may have come to a nuclear crisis or a life-threatening shutdown of infrastructure due to cyberwarfare. “The end is near...”

The more sensitive among us can really feel something ominous happening. They are picking up the profound distress worldwide and it is very uncomfortable. Is there a way to deal with this?

Well, for a very long time we have been teaching about the two things necessary to cross this worldly ocean of suffering and distress: faith and patience. Now is the time to take it seriously and put it into practice. Now is the time to move into the peace and hope<sup>1</sup> of our inner life. Now is the time to focus less on what we see and focus more on how we see it.

“The outcome of darkness is light, goodness and progress – look for it!”<sup>2, 3</sup>

Who’s at fault here? Isaiah 45:7 gives the mystical perspective: “I form the light and create darkness: I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these things.” So, whether it is Putin being portrayed bellicose or Biden being portrayed as feckless – it’s all His Will in all things for reasons unfathomable to the human understanding – faith.

Imagine a mystic giving the nightly news and not a reporter. What would the mystic present? How would the mystic see it? Positive thought forms support the Light. Are we not Caregivers?

Only Love, Jerry

<sup>1</sup> John 1 promises hope; that the darkness never overcomes the light - faith. However, remember that we may not see the victory of the Light over the dark in our lifetime - patience.

<sup>2</sup> This is a quote from a beautiful spirit guide – White Eagle. Deb Dore sent it to Sandy and it was an answer to the message of this symposium.

<sup>3</sup> Already we see people of different nations coming together in a selfless effort to help the refugees and those under siege. Already selfless love is being inspired from deep inside the human spirit.
